

A. Jackson Stenner, Ph.D., Chief Science Officer & Co-founder

Short bio:

Recognized worldwide for his ongoing contributions to measurement theory methodology, Jack has published more than 70 papers, monographs and books primarily on measurement and statistical and evaluation methodology, with a focus on psychometrics.

Long bio:

Along with Malbert Smith III, Jack co-founded MetaMetrics. Jack has directed MetaMetrics' research and development efforts since its inception. Jack has published more than 70 papers, monographs and books primarily on measurement and statistical and evaluation methodology. Jack has also worked on a number of prestigious research projects with the National Center for Education Statistics, the Gates Foundation and others to study various educational issues such as the effectiveness of the NAEP assessments, summer reading loss and English language learning. Jack teaches graduate seminars at Duke University and The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has been named a research professor at UNC's School of Education. Jack is president of the Institute for Objective Measurement and serves on the U.S. National Institute of Statistical Sciences board. To learn more about Jack, click here.